Limitations & Restrictions

California Residents:

Dr. Childress is only licensed as a psychologist in California and so can only conduct therapy from his Cyberspace Office for residents in the state of California.

Residents Outside of California:

Dr. Childress is currently restricted from provided extended psychological consultation or psychotherapy to residents outside of California. However, Dr. Childress is permitted to provide a limited-scope initial consultation in his areas of professional practice specialization to help orient the general public to information from professional psychology, pathology, and its treatment to assist with developing options for solutions.

Dr. Childress will limit his initial consultation with residents outside of California to two sessions. These consultation sessions are for the purpose of developing an understanding for the nature of the client's situation and request, and to assist the client in developing directions for solutions.

I will not provide consultation to any Oregon resident or Oregon attorney.

International Residents

There are no international regulatory agencies for Internet-mediated professional practice. However, Dr. Childress strives to respect the rights of jurisdictions relative to their residents. The credentials for licesure for Dr. Childress are certified by the National Register of Health Service Psychologists

(<https://www.nationalregister.org/>) which is an organization that assists in the portability of licenses across jurisdiction by pre-certifying professional credentials for education and training.

Professional-to-Professional Consultation

There are no restrictions on the degree and extent of professional-to-professional consultation that Dr. Childress can provide to an attorney and their parent-client, or with another mental health professional, either directly in-session with appropriate permission, or in separately consultation.
